

2010-07-05 14:24:24 by webmaster

5 JUL 2010

Godfrey Bloom MEP | Blog

A year ago, climate sceptics seemed to be fighting a losing battle. Then along came Climategate. Then COP15 failed. Then Glaciergate. The scandals emerging from climate alarmist circles are now hard to keep up with. We're all sceptics now. Except of course, for the new UK government, who seem committed to this stupid idea of putting up wind farms where they are not wanted.

Chris Huhne of the Liberal Democrats is the Con-Dem coalition's Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change, and replaces Ed Miliband, who was also a fan of wind. Here is Huhne, banging on about how great wind is at an event in Leicester Square.

Read entire article (includes the Huhne video)